Around the world at Mohawk College

International students come to Mohawk for an education. But they get so much more.

Our international students and graduates have shared many stories expressing appreciation for experiences at Mohawk College. Some talk about their education and the professors who inspired them; others write about life at Mohawk and the support they received; while others speak about the great opportunities available both while studying and after graduation.

Mohawk College offers over 125 programs to 13,000 full time students, 43,000 part time and over 4,000 apprenticeship students. Mohawk welcomes over 1,200 international students annually, representing more than 70 countries, from around the world.

With more than 125 programs, this is only an introduction

Mohawk College's catalogue of more than 125 programs allows students to choose from a wide range of options, from studying the latest in aircraft technology to understanding the beating of the human heart to learning what it takes to start a new business.

As important as the programs we offer, is how they're offered. At Mohawk education starts in the classroom, but preparation for the working world continues through hands-on learning in laboratories and simulated work environments, through applied research projects, and on co-operative work placements (often paid positions). The opportunity to combine a college diploma with a university degree, or to earn both credentials simultaneously, is made possible through the partnership between Mohawk College and McMaster University.
